COMPARED WITH THE "GLORIOUS CLIMATE OF CALIFORNIA"

A good many questions have been as ed me about the South East Coast of Florida, where I spenn the late but not lamented winter, some of which I would like to answer in the columns of the Transcriper.

I will say in the beginning, however, that I do not wish to be understood as trying to persuade people to move from this Peninsula to Florida. The Peninsula is a mighty good piece of country, its people enjoy life about as much as the people of any other region and can keep out of jail or the legislature, if they want to, about as well as lature, if they want to, about as well as folks can elsewhere; its fried chicken and can vas back duck have never been equalled, and its stewed terrapin is a poem. And, besides, a person who cannot make where else.

But there are persons who do not flourish
in the winter time of northern latitudes;
who long for summer skies in January and lespise the song of the six tons of coal

Man was created in a warm climate.
The
historical data we have about his first outtit of summer clothes is evidence enough of

when he has woke up and tound minsel alive and not a ciothing store in the county.

Daue County is a good deal bigger than belaware and, though it cannot approach the latter in the quality of its stewed terrapin and ice cream, it is going to be a great country. It is rich in climate and possibilities. It is also rich in alligators, but since the heavy tourist travel set in, they have taken to the back county. They, the alligators, were shot at stared at and kolaked until iffe came to be a burden, and only two or three have had the courage to remain and see it out.

The alligator has never yet been known to eat a too inquisitive northern tourist, but he is in other ways a very useful creature. He is fond of the Florida "razorback" hog, and should therefore be en couraged. But the "razorback" does not flourish in Dade County.

The alligator is really a much less harmful creature than is generally supposed by those who have seen only his photograph, taken by an anantuer. He is not usually aggressive, and you might walk by him, writing affew feet of his nose without at tracting from him more than a mere glance. He is usually becomes accustomed to the gaze of a northern tourist, if it is respectful and not too fixed.

Of course, if you are a total stranger to the alligator, you don't want to g right.

less he were feeling unusually well at the moment.

The Lake Worth region is a garden spot of Dade County. Here the Gulf Stream washes the shores of Florida, varying in temperature only three or four degrees in a year and helps serve out an atmosphere that exhibitantes and braces but never chills. During more than three-fourths of the year the winds come fresh and bracing, but balmy, room this wonderful ocean river, bringing comfort and health upon their wings. There are no fogs, no wind, no dust. The air is like champagne, but a good deal cheater, and one feels that life is worth living just for an opportunity to breathe it.

If e is worth living just for an opportunity to beathe it.

Lake Worth is thenty-two mites long and about a mile wide. It is salt, having an inlet from the ocean, and ab unds in fish, turtles, and other brain food.

The lake ties parallel with the ocean and the strip of land between the two is less than three-fourths of a mile wide at the widest point. Along the ocean side for its entire length there is on this strip of land a magnificent belt of beautiful tropical timber, which the axe of man should never be permitted to mar.

The Lake Worth country is the land of the oceanut, the pineapple, the mango the the Lake Worth country is the land of the c. coantit, the pineapple, the mango, the guava, the orange, the lemon, the citron, the itime, the sayodilla, the anona, the tamarind, the banana and many other tropical and sub-ropical fruits. Coffee has been also successfully grown there, and experiments are being made with the bread fruit, the nutmeg and several rare and delicious fruits brought from India by the Agricultural Department at Washington, notably the Mangostern, which is thus described: "The fruit is round, the size of a medium orange. The shell is like that of pomegranate; the inside of a rose color devided by thin partitions, as in the orange, in which the seeds are lodged, surrounded by a soft juley pulp of a delicious flavor, partaking of the strawberry and grape, and is esteemed one of the richest fruits in the world."

The "Monstera Deliciosa," or ceriman of Trinidad, is another rare tropical fruit that has been successfully introduced and the plants are beginning to bear.

Dade County, Florida, is the only part of the United States that can successfully grow these tender tropical fruits. No part of California can grow either the cocoanut, the pine apple or the mango, except under glass.

the pineapple or the mango, except under glass.

Pinc-pple growing in Florida has passed the experimental stage. Fortunes have been made in the business in a few years, and in locations free from killing frosts, such as the coast of Dade County about Lake Worth, the business promises to continue remunerative to all who engage in it and pursue it carefully.

It is the opinion of many that the culture of that most fuscious tropical fruit, the mango, which northern people have as yethardly had a taste of, will in a few years become even more profitable in South Florida than the pine-apple.

Mr. Flagler's Jacksonville, St. Augustine and Indian River Railroad, the best built and finest equiped railroad, in the South, now lbuilding down the west side of the Indian River, and which will soon enter the borders of Dade, and reach Lake Worth early in the coming winter, putting that most favored land in all-rail connection with the north, will give a great impetus to both. The Centreville Chapter leads the district in earnest aggressive work as well as in numbers, and Mr. Collins has reason to be proud of his League. "In 1724 the Rev. John Armstrong 'was inducted into the parish.' He was intemperate, and the records of the parish show that upon one occasion he was so over taken with liquor in the church that he could not read the services, so the people went out. They complained of his conduct, and some of the neighboring rectors and other officials of the adjoining parishes tried him on a libel exhibited against him by the church wardens, for many wicked and immoral actions which were proven before the said commissioners. He was about to bring suit for the recovery of his salary, and also prosecute the president of the commission that tried him and deposed him, for acting without a commission from His Majesty, the King, when, in a drunken fit, he fell into a fire and was burned to death."

The present St. Stephen's Church was consecrated on May 8th, 1874. St. Stephen's is situated in one of the most beautiful sections of Cecil county, and in its grave-yard repose the remains of many of the county's representative men. The first names read were those two beacon-lights of Historic St. Paul's, Horatio Beck and Stevenson Constable, as representing the later church officers. Mr. Linnington Roberts Shewell, responded, paying a beautiful tribute of respect to Horatio Beck, who died in 1870, and who, though unknown becsonally to the speaker, had left an excellent record behind him.
